

Honoring Caregivers in the Black Community

Caregiving is a labor of love that requires patience, selflessness, and resilience. Within the Black community, caregiving is deeply rooted in cultural traditions, with many individuals stepping up to care for aging family members, relatives with chronic illnesses, or loved ones with disabilities.

Organizations like The Senior Alliance are committed to ensuring that Black caregivers receive the resources, education, and advocacy needed to navigate their caregiving journeys successfully.

The Senior Alliance is happy to share its newest caregiving guide, Caregiving in the Black Community. This guide was developed with input and guidance from Healthier Black Elder Center.
